53 DIE IN TITAN 2 BASE EXPLOSION

Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

A Marine recruiting sergeant in yesterday talking about his business of recruiting.

Draft laws have been changed he said to where it looks as though married men will be taken.

Bad news too to the young men who are going to college just to escape the draft. They have to keep their grades up or off they go to the armed forces.

Now that is what we would call a perfect example of motivation. Motivation is that factor which will make an otherwise sorry student get down to work and make decent grades. The motivation in this case is the alternative of going into the Army.

Those college students who are going to college to escape the draft or to keep from working just may mature a little in the coming months.

The Russian school teacher asked a pupil, "Who were the first human beings?"

"Adam and Eve," the youngster replied.

"And what nationality were they?"

"Russians," of course.

"Fine, fine, and how do you know they were Russians?"

"Easy — they had no roof over their heads, no clothes to wear and only one apple for the two of them and they called it Paradise."

Kings, one of the Beatles, says he hopes his child will be a musician. It is typical of parents to hope their children will be far more successful than they have been.

Two hillbillies who had never been on a train were drafted and on their way to camp. A man came through the train selling bananas which neither hillbiller had seen before.

Each of them bought one. As one of them bit into his banana, the train entered a tunnel. His voice came to his companion.

"Have you got yours yet?"

"Not yet. Why?"

"Well, don't touch it. I've got one bite and gone blind."

First thing we saw when we drove in the driveway yesterday evening was that cat.

Oldest at home is on a camping trip at the lake and before he left he dumped in a big basket of lettuce leaves in Fluff the Guinea Pig's cage. Presumably this is to last Fluff for the time he is gone.

Of course the lettuce began to rot right away so now we have the job of cleaning out all the rotted lettuce and feeding the Guinea Pig daily. We were feeding it anyway.

It has been our experience that when the kids want a dog or cat or what have you, they take care of it religiously for a few days then it is up to mother and dad.

For some reason an animal cannot live on once a week feeding.

We turned to channel two last night and watched an educational film on the impoverished people in South America.

At Recife, Brazil the practice of voodoo is still extant and in fact it is very much alive. Some of the voodoo dances were shown and for a minute we thought we were watching the Lloyd Thurston show.

A chap whose hobby was fishing told such tall tales about his catches that his friends expressed open disbelief. So he bought a set of scales and told all that he weighed every fish himself.

Responsibility of Legislators Is Pointed Out

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UP) — Gov. Edward T. Breathitt and top state officials planned to meet today with legislators from the 2nd Congressional district in the second of seven scheduled "work sessions" prior to the Aug. 23 special session of the General Assembly.

Third District legislators will meet with the governor and other officials Wednesday, those from the 4th District Thursday, and the 5th District Friday. Meetings for the 6th District will be held Aug. 18 and the 7th Aug. 19.

The governor said he told 11 state legislators from the 1st District Monday in a private conference that he has no bill to recommend at this time and does not expect to have one until the pre-legislative sessions are ended.

The 1st District legislators met with the Governor at a lunch at the Executive Mansion.

Breathitt said he told the Western Kentucky legislators that they face two major responsibilities in connection with the special session: "conducting taxpayers in view of the 100 per cent assessment of property for taxes ordered by the Kentucky Court of Appeals to start Jan. 1, 1966."

To insure that public schools will not be "crippled financially," some legislators have said the general session in their areas is for a reduction of the ceiling on school taxes to offset proposed increased assessments.

The governor said, "There was a general discussion but no decisions were reached" at Monday's session.

He said he was unaware of any consensus among the legislators of any particular plan for a course of action. Referring to the possible length of the special session he said, "I have contacted the legislators and they are working as soon as it can."

Gov. Harry Lee Waterfield said he believes the legislature should be able to "devise a workable, temporary solution" to the tax problem once it gets all the facts.

He said he made a 3-point suggestion that the legislature:

- Reduce state-level property tax rates.
- Insure that no additional property tax is imposed at the local level on taxpayers now paying their share.
- And insure equalization of the property tax to eliminate inequities.

State Dept. of Public Instruction Dr. Harry Sparks outlined the effects on school districts of limiting the maximum additional revenues to certain percentages of income, and the effects of lowering the tax ceiling on school taxes from its present $150.

Legislators present at Monday's session included:

- State Reps. Tom Garrett, Paducah; Tom Brimstone, Franklin; and Martin J. Duffy, Louisville; and state Reps. Harry Maddox, Hickman; Fred Morgan, Paducah; Charles Lassiter, Murray; Everett

State Trooper Orville Rudolph waived examining trial on the assault charge and was ordered held to the September McCracken County grand jury.

January obtained a warrant following the arrest charging that Rudolph had used a "Judo chop" while arresting Mrs. January on June 26, Judo is an Oriental self-defense and physical training method.

Frank Rickman Does Outstanding Job With Book Company

Frank Rickman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden Rickman of 1000 Walnut Street, has been named to the honor roll of the Southwestern Company for the second week in a row. The company employs young men to sell Bibles and other books during the summer months.

Frank has been in the top twenty salesmen of the company every week this summer, and is the only man this summer to be the top man twice.

He started selling books the summer of his freshman year at Murray State College. He has been a top salesman for the company since that time. By working locally and with the book firm, Frank made his way through Murray State College and graduated in 1964. This September he will begin his second year of medical school at the University of Louisville.

Frank is working 75 to 80 hours each week selling books, so that he can achieve the funds necessary to put himself through medical school.

He is a top student scholastically at the medical school. He also won honors at Murray High School and Murray State College in the football and scholastic field.

His wife, the former Jane Hubbs, has been attending Murray State this summer working on her master's degree. She teaches school in Louisville while Frank is attending medical school.

Searing Heat, Blinding Smoke Prevent Rescue In Deep Silo

By DARRELL BACK — United Press International

SEARCY, Ark. (UP) — Rescue workers today hauled 53 bodies of a construction crew from the blackened depths of a Titan II missile silo where they perished in the nation's worst disaster involving space-age materials.

Two workmen scrambled to safety through searing heat and blinding smoke shortly after the explosion Monday in the nine-level structure that is equal to a 15-story building. Fire and the smoke apparently sealed off any chance the others had to escape.

Maj. Gen. A. J. Beck, chief of maintenance operations for the Strategic Air Command SAC, said he put on an oxygen mask and went into the launch site himself and saw the closed door open. He said the only closed door was the entrance to the control room on the other end of the missile complex.

President Johnson ordered an immediate investigation of the underground explosion and fire. A special team of 30 experts arrived on the scene today.

Capt. Douglas E. Wood, director of information at Little Rock Air Force Base, said the 53 dead would "very likely" be the final total. He said muddy water in the bottom of the silo would have to be pumped out before a final determination could be made.

Warhead De-Activated

The nuclear warhead of the missile had been deactivated before the construction crew began making modifications in the 170-foot deep silo. The fuel inside the missile did not explode.

Wood said rescue workers reported bodies were stacked in piles around the ladders on the second and third levels of the silo. The ladders are used normally by workmen going from floor to floor.

The explosion was believed to have occurred in a diesel engine in one of the little rooms in the launch duct. It erupted on level two, 40 to 80 feet below the surface of the tunneling area which is topped by a seven-foot-thick, electrically-operated door.

Charles F. Strong, chief of Air Force missile safety, arrived at Little Rock Air Force Base and was directing the investigation.

The silo is 56 feet in diameter and the huge missile almost fills it. A narrow ladder leads up the side of the silo from the bottom to the tunnel that leads to the escape hatch, where the two survivors made it to safety.

The explosion ripped through the silo Monday afternoon. The silo is one of 18 containing five-story-tall Titan intercontinental missiles scattered through north central Arkansas.

Peter Kiewit Sons Co. of Omaha, Neb., a contracting firm, is doing a $4.5 million modification job on the silo.

Noxious fumes filled the silo and all persons without gas masks were ordered back 2,000 yards. About 300 persons, wives, children and relatives of the victims, gathered along the road leading to the silo.

Capt. Michael Romans, chaplain at Little Rock Air Force Base, told them there was no hope and they should go home and rest.

"You can't learn anything, you can't do anything, you might as well go home and get some rest," he said. "They're bringing your relatives right by you and you don't even know it."

He meant the ambulances that slipped up the road with bodies as they were lifted from the shaft.

"I was standing next to the ladder," said Gary Lay, 18, one of the survivors. "All of a sudden, I heard an explosion and saw a big flame of light."

"Then the light went out and I heard people screaming to get the ladder."

"Everybody ran for it and with everyone gathered around the ladder no one could get up."

"I felt my way around the wall and went through part of the flames and back to the tunnel entrance. Then I felt my way along the wall to the control room and they took me out in an ambulance."

City Schools Get Approval On Civil Rights Compliance

Superintendent Fred Schultz has received approval from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for the Murray Independent School District's plan for compliance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

In a telephone conversation, Schultz said that the plan had been approved and that a letter of confirmation concerning this district's plan would follow.

The plan of the Murray Board of Education gives complete freedom of choice of schools in all grades. This policy will be effective starting with the 1966-67 school year, and a new choice will be offered to each student thereafter once annually.

Parents of all children entering the school system for the first time and parents of all children in all grades already enrolled in the school system will be given the opportunity to make their choice of school, without regard to race, color, or national origin, Schultz said.

School personnel are not permitted to advise, recommend or otherwise influence which choice is made. They are not permitted to favor or penalize children because of choices.

In the event more choices are made for a particular school than can be accommodated due to overcrowding of facilities, preference will be accorded to the students choosing that school without regard to race, color or national origin, or to prior attendance at the school, he continued. No choice will be denied for any reason other than overcrowding of facilities.

Every student whose choice is denied because of overcrowding will be given an effective choice between a predominantly white or predominantly Negro school within a reasonable distance of his residence.

Pupils and their parents or guardians are required to exercise their choice of schools during the week from August 27 through September 3.

After a choice has been made and assignment to a school has been made by the Superintendent under this plan, no transfer to any other school during that school year will be permitted except on grounds of change of residence or similar non-racially based considerations.

Letters to parents and Choice Forms will be placed in the hands of all students and their parents on August 27. The parents must designate the schools of their choice by September 3rd. This process will be followed annually on April 15 with return of choice of school form deadline specified as May 1.

The plan further states that staff desegregation is necessary. Race, color or national origin will not be a factor in the initial assignment to or within a school, of teachers, administrators or other employees who serve pupils. Steps will be taken toward elimination of segregation of teaching and staff personnel in the schools resulting from prior assignments based on race, color, or national origin, including joint faculty meetings, in-service programs, workshops, demonstrations, and other professional meetings.

Principals, teachers and other staff members will not be discharged or demoted solely because of actual or expected loss of pupils in a school where the pupils they serve or have been serving choose or are assigned to a school where they can obtain a desegregated education, nor will any such action be taken on ground of race, color, or national origin. All faculty and staff of this district during school year of 1964-65 have been reemployed without demotion for school year 1965-66.

1965 KENTUCKY HOMECOMING YEAR

The Rest 2 News

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Tuesday, Aug. 10, the 222nd day of 1965 with 143 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Venus and Mars.

Herbert Hoover, 31st President of the United States, was born on this day in 1874.

On this day in history:

In 1776, a committee of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson suggested the United States adopt "E Pluribus Unum" as the motto for its Great Seal.

In 1821, Missouri was admitted to the nation as the 24th state.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill met at Quebec for their sixth conference of World War II.

In 1961, a plane crash in Norway killed 94 London school boys.

A thought for the day — American novelist Dorothy Fisher said: "A mother is not a person to lean on, but a person to make leaning unnecessary."

Highlight Of Phase

The highlight of phase two was the historic decree adopted by the Tulane Council last fall committing Catholics to all-out participation in the ecumenical movement.

Phase three promises to be less dramatic and more difficult. Two things will be happening simultaneously:

Protestant denominations will move beyond mere cooperation to try to achieve organic unity.

Protestants and Catholics will move beyond mutual courtesy and try to resolve—or at least clarify—some of the real differences of conviction that divide them.

Both processes already are underway.

Six leading U. S. Protestant denominations agreed last April to begin drafting a plan of union that would bring them together in a new church with 23 million members.

The merger plan will be presented to representatives of the six denominations at a meeting in Dallas next spring. If they approve, it will be submitted to the national conferences and conventions of the participating denominations. And there's where the hitch may come. Involved are the Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, United Church of Christ, Evangelical United Brethren and the Disciples of Christ.

Can't Agree

There seems little doubt, on the basis of what has happened to date, that theologians of the six denominations can agree on the form of a united church, its doctrine, structure and sacraments. The big question is whether laymen, local pastors and ecclesiastical politicians really want to cease being Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, etc., and unite in a great new church.

Experience has demonstrated that genuine doctrinal differences may be a far less formidable barrier to church union than such non-theological factors as inertia, nostalgia, attachment to familiar labels and

ways of doing things, tribal pride and vested interests in the status quo.

The only way to overcome these obstacles is to encourage rank-and-file members of the churches to become as enthusiastic about the possibilities of union and as impatient with ancient denominational quarrels as are those few who have been directly involved in the merger talks.

So far, relatively little has been done along these lines by the six denominations' assemblies in the Commission on Church Union. But there is no reason why local congregations cannot undertake the task of self-education on their own initiative. Every act of study material is available from denominational headquarters.

Christians Enter Third Phase Of Quest

By LOUIS CASSELS

United Press International
Christians have entered the third phase of the great quest for reunion known as the ecumenical movement.

In the first phase, which opened about 50 years ago, the major Protestant bodies ended centuries of mutual estrangement and began to draw together in friendly, cooperative relationships. The great achievement of this phase was the establishment of such agencies as the national council and world council of churches.

During phase one, the Roman Catholic church remained aloof. Phase two began with the coronation of Pope John XXIII. From the day he ascended the papal throne, Pope John displayed an earnest desire to make friends with the "separated brethren."

Protestants responded to his warmth and goodness and reciprocated his gestures of good will. Almost overnight, a truce was proclaimed in the cold war that had been the cleavage of Christianity for more than 400 years.

The only way to overcome these obstacles is to encourage rank-and-file members of the churches to become as enthusiastic about the possibilities of union and as impatient with ancient denominational quarrels as are those few who have been directly involved in the merger talks.

So far, relatively little has been done along these lines by the six denominations' assemblies in the Commission on Church Union. But there is no reason why local congregations cannot undertake the task of self-education on their own initiative. Every act of study material is available from denominational headquarters.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY

WIMBORNE, England (AP) — Tragedy struck Andrea Constantinos, a Greek-born café owner, for the second time in six weeks Sunday when his son was killed only 400 yards from where another son died in a wreck. Louis Constantinos, 18, was killed with two others in a three-car crash near Poole Sunday. Six weeks ago his brother, John, 22, died in a crash near there.

UNDERWATER HOME

LONDON (AP) — Two young men prepared Monday for a week-long stay underwater in a two-ton steel tube. John Heath, 22, and Colin Irwin, 19, members of the Bournemouth Sub-Aqua Club which is financing the experiment, are to live in the cylinder "home" beginning next weekend. The 12-foot seven-foot tube will be dropped in 40 feet of water off Devon County.

CHAPTER 23

LUCIA Bernardi and I put the money from Skurietti and the second copy of the Arbi report in my suitcase, along with the few things I had. Then we tied the place up to remove any traces of my occupancy.

It was well past midnight. I turned off all the lights and let ourselves quietly out of the house. Darkness enveloped us.

We walked down the hill to the car.

I locked the suitcase in the trunk and got into the driving seat. I switched on the lights, but did not start the car immediately.

Lucia looked at me. "What is it?"

"I was wondering which way to go."

It was only partly true. What I was really wondering was whether the meeting with Skurietti, which had undoubtedly frightened me, had so frightened me that I had begun to imagine things; that I had begun to see things under the bed.

"Through Beaulieu," she said. I started the car, turned and drove as fast as I could around the bend and up the hill.

Earlier, we had decided to go to the Sangers' villa in Mougins and had phoned Adele to send Marie, her housekeeper, on vacation.

Half an hour later I drove into the garage of the Sanger house.

We slept most of the day. Marie had left a note indicating which rooms were to be used, and reporting that there was food in the refrigerator.

We had a meal late in the afternoon. When she had cleared away after it, Lucia suddenly began to watch the clock and to worry. Had Brigadier Faris understood exactly what he had to do? Was I sure? It was five o'clock now. Did he know what he had to say when he went to the clinic?

I did my best to reassure her, to appear relaxed, and confident; but it was not easy. I had been trying not to think about the meeting with Faris. Her anxiety was infectious.

We had judged it advisable for me to arrive at the clinic just fifteen minutes early. In that way, we thought, there would be no risk of my being spotted by men shadowing Faris.

I arrived at exactly a quarter to eight.

It had been during a weekend that I had recognized the whether I was really to be relied upon.

"You need have no fear of that," I said firmly. "Will the money be in French francs?"

"Yes. I take it that when you have the money you and this woman will be leaving the country?"

"No. She will surrender to the police."

"With a reasonable explanation?"

"Exactly. It will not, of course, include any reference to our business. She will surrender our business. She will surrender Colonel Arbi's personal papers."

"What papers?"

"I understand that they consist chiefly of an unfinished list of the names of the Kurds who were in the area."

He seemed satisfied. "It is time that I was going," he said. "I shall be at my hotel waiting."

With a nod he turned away and walked back up the stairs. There were lights on in Le Beaulieu, and, when I drove into the garage, I saw why. In the space for the second car there was a Lancia.

Philip Sanger, as well as Lucia, was there to welcome the hero home from the war.

Lucia ran to meet me. Sanger followed at a more leisurely pace.

"Was it all right?" she asked breathlessly.

"Yes. All right. Not exactly according to plan, but all right. No casualties so far. What's he doing here?"

Sanger was near enough to hear the question. He grinned. "Well," he said broadly, "I thought I might as well see if there was anything I could do to lend a helping hand."

"He has come," said Lucia. "He has come to see me."

"Was it all right?" she asked breathlessly.

"Yes. All right. Not exactly according to plan, but all right. No casualties so far. What's he doing here?"

Robin Roberts Proves He Is Not A "Was Kid" As He Shuts Out Former Teammates In Dome

By LEONARD A. GRANATO
UPI Sports Writer

Robin Roberts, the former wild kid, isn't a "was" kid after all. But for a while there, the only ones who realized it were the big right-handed pitcher and the Houston Astros, who were smart enough to sign him Friday after the Baltimore Orioles of the American League had cut him loose.

Roberts, the ace of the Philadelphia Phillies' mound staff for a decade, went the route Monday night to shut out his former team, the Baltimore Orioles, in the first game of the season against the Orioles.

In the only other major league action Dean Chance of the Los Angeles Angels pitched the Cleveland Indians and beat them 3-0.

"Tonight was one of those nights where everything went my way," the 38-year-old former fireballer said. "It was quite a thrill for me. We got plenty of runs, and I had nice stuff. It's really a nice feeling."

The Phillies dealt Roberts to the New York Yankees in 1961. The Yankees took a look at him and promptly shuffled him to Baltimore. This season the Orioles intended to use Roberts as a reliever, and the right-hander wasn't having any. He asked out.

Promised Starting Role
Baltimore put him on the block and the Astros signed him as a free agent. They promised to start him. They renewed the promise after his Monday performance.

Making his first appearance in four years against a National League team, Roberts was masterful in the air-conditioned dome stadium. Pitchers like the dome because it shuts out the heat and humidity.

"But I don't believe I will have any trouble outside of the dome, either—I feel good," Roberts said. "The Astros scored four runs in the first inning to wrap it up. Lou Burdette gave up singles to Joe Morgan, Bob Aspromonte, Joe Garmon and Ron Brand. The hits were aided by a hit batsman and a error."

Gets Three Hits
Tony Gorman had three of the Phillies hits, a double and two singles.

Burdette lost his fifth decision against two victories. This made Roberts' record 1-0 in the NL to go with his 5-3 at home.

THINGS ARE CLICKING in the State Department of Education with installation of a new Honeywell H-200 electronic digital computer. Honeywell representative Charles Bratton shows computer operator Mrs. Jane Stanley how to get the high speed printer rolling. The computer, most powerful of any in departments of education across the nation, can print 950 lines of 132 characters each, read or write 4,360 records of 500 characters each, punch 150 cards, read 800 cards and execute approximately one million instructions—all at one time and all in one minute.

for the 1965 season. We are pleased to learn that growers continue to decide their intentions to purchase breeding ewes are above recent years. Also, growers who had discontinued raising sheep indicate that they are restocking.

We hope that recent future over the state's surplus food program will not precipitate drastic actions that may result in hardships for our school children and the many thousands of Kentuckians who are in genuine need of such assistance. We readily admit, and having been pointing out the fact for some time, that there are many instances where persons without need for food are being helped. In all cases, we have sought to get solid evidence that would lead to the prosecution of such violators. In some cases, we have even found it necessary to withdraw food donations from an entire county. Such extreme action often adds to the hardships being suffered by many needy people who are already sorely underprivileged economically.

I have complete confidence in Thomas A. Lewis, our director of Commodity Distribution. Tom has been the only director the program has ever had since it was set up in 1949. His excellent background of school teaching and service as a Lt. Colonel in the Quartermaster during WWI, when combined with his high personal integrity and industry, have made him one of the top surplus food administrators in the United States. School people have long been complimentary of the way Tom has administered his part of the National School Lunch Program, and just a few years ago the U. S. Department of Agriculture declared that Kentucky had the best plan of operation of any state in the Nation.

The honoree wore for the bridal event a tulle-trimmed frock of white lace fashioned with style with a business gift corsage of a yellow gladiolus. Mrs. Crawford was attended in a blue linen dress with lace trim down the front while Mrs. Hughes wore a pink two-piece linen dress with the pink lace insets in the bodice. Both mothers wore hostesses' gift corsages of white carnations.

A beautifully appointed tea table was overlaid with a white cloth with silver metallic threads and centered with an arrangement of stock and daisies in a silver bowl. The appointments were in silver and crystal.

Assisting the hostesses in the serving were Mrs. James Key, Miss Nannette Solomon, Miss Kay Hughes, Miss Jan Hughes, Miss Susan Williams, and Miss Nancy Williams. The many lovely gifts including the silver setting of silver given the honoree by the hostesses were displayed on tables in the club room.

Mrs. Leonard Wood kept the register at the table overlaid with a white linen drawn work cloth. Guests signed the bride's book with a pin decorated with flowers.

Background piano music was provided throughout the afternoon by Miss Trudy Lilly.

You didn't ask for it. But you can have it - this pandemonium. Designer Bill Smith, of Robah Sport, offers several for wearing at "in" places. Simple: A bodice of sheer off-white wool, same sleeve. The pants attached are like knickers to the knee and then become tight to the ankle - like leggings.

Dear Abby

It Won't Be Easy, Lady!

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and I have a boy friend I'll call "Bruce." He's my age, but he's a year ahead of me in school. His folks left town, but didn't take their car, so Bruce called and asked me if I wanted to go for a ride with him. It was night time and my parents were out for the evening. I don't have permission to go in cars with boys, and Bruce doesn't have a driver's permit, but I said, "Okay, for just a short drive." He picked me up and we drove around where no one would see us.

Well, my mother found out about it and she told my Dad and now I am grounded for two weeks! Mother said she heard it from the mother of one of Bruce's friends, who said that Bruce was bragging all over the place about how he took me for a ride. Should I be mad at the woman who told my mother? Or should I be mad at Bruce for letting this leak out?

DEAR GROUNDED: If you must be "mad" at someone, try yourself. Bruce may have been responsible for the "leak," but that's what you get for going with a drip. You had it coming.

DEAR ABBY: I am new in this neighborhood and want to be on friendly terms with my neighbors, but here is my problem: Whenever I see this certain neighbor, she says, "Why don't you drop in for coffee sometime?"

I never have because I am not sure when it is convenient for her to have me. I saw her this morning at the grocery store and she said, "I'm hurt! You never did accept my invitation to drop in for coffee." I wonder if I should take her up on it and just drop in sometime? I just hate popping in on people. I don't want this woman for an enemy. I don't want to handle this TO GO OR NOT TO GO?

DEAR TO GO: No all "drop in" invitations are sincere. The next time your neighbor extends such an invitation, ask her when it would be convenient or you to come. And further to show your willingness to be friendly, invite HER to your home for coffee. But name the time.

I lost my son through a terrible accident. He had been married only a year and a half at the time of his death. He and his wife had no children. My son was well insured, so his wife was left a large amount of money. She recently married again and is spending my son's money on this new husband of hers. I should think her conscience would hurt her. And I should think this new husband would feel awfully cheap living on a dead man's money.

Do you believe that people get paid back for their wrongdoings? My son meant the world to me, and it is very hard for me to have to sit back and watch this go on. What can be done?

DEAR MOTHER: The money your son left belongs to his wife because obviously he wanted it that way. I see no "wrongdoing" here. If you are looking for someone who will find fault with your former daughter-in-law for remarrying and spending that which he rightfully hers, you will have to look further.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "COMPLETLY" IN NASHVILLE: "The greatest fault is to be conscious of none." (Carlyle) I would like to hear HER side of it.

Fashionettes

"His" bib sports a bow tie on a three-button vest. "Her" bib has a ruffled collar and is applied with flowers. Both, for babies, are in time for the ice cream season. Both are made of vinyl-backed terrycloth.

Ron Postal, director of the National Council of Men's Fashion in Beverly Hills, believes that if the American male gave only a small portion of the time to his general wardrobe as he does to his sporty clothes, he would be surprised at the enjoyment his clothing would add to his business and social activities. Most men, he maintains, regard their business clothes as drab working uniforms.
